FOREVER PROTECTED

The Amazon is losing 10,000 acres every day due to logging and other illegal activities.

Junglekeepers is determined to protect more than 300,000 acres of pristine rainforest in the Las Piedras corridor by 2029. We will also secure the protection of this land through an agreement with the Peruvian government for lasting impact.

OUR APPROACH WORKS: ZERO ACRES LOST SINCE PROTECTION

Junglekeepers has maintained and safeguarded 130,000 acres of rainforest—100% of the land under its protection—since its inception. We buy the land, cultivate a presence on the ground with local rangers, and work with Indigenous communities to promote sustainable ownership.

TIME IS OF THE ESSENCE

Every day, the equivalent of hundreds of football fields of rainforest are being erased. The longer we wait to acquire new land, the longer it takes to purchase and protect it. Aggressive logging and other threats have increased the cost to defend the Amazon and expand our reach.

MEET PAUL ROSOLIE

OUR FOUNDER WHO'S LEADING THE FIGHT

Our founder, Paul Rosolie, is a conservationist, author, and explorer who has dedicated his life to protecting the Amazon. With two decades of on-the-ground experience in Peru's Las Piedras region, Paul has forged partnerships with local communities, Indigenous leaders, and conservation organizations to defend one of the most biodiverse regions on Earth.
